CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, et al.,

Defendants.

Before the Court is Defendant Bruce Lery’s motion to dismiss Plaintiff’s first amended complaint. ECF No. 46. The Court will grant the motion in part and deny it in part.

13

14

Plaintiff Katharine Savin began working as a medical social worker at San Francisco General Hospital in February 2015. First Amended Complaint (“FAC”), ECF No. 39, ¶ 15. During her employment, Savin was assigned to the palliative care unit, which consisted of physicians, nurses, social workers, and a member of the clergy. Id. Father Bruce Lery was the clergy member assigned to the unit. Id. In that capacity, “he provided counseling and support services to patients of all faiths” and “his duties were not primarily religious in nature.” Id. Defendants Dr. Heather Harris and Dr. Anne Kinderman supervised the unit. Id.

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART MOTION TO DISMISS

Re: ECF No. 46

1 Lery hugged and held Plaintiff for an unreasonable amount of time when he would greet her in the 2 workplace,” and that “[o]n more than one occasion, he placed his hands on her shoulders, and said, 3 ‘I love you so much.’” Id. ¶¶ 24, 20. She also alleges that “Father Lery grabbed [her] by the 4 collar of her shirt in the workplace.” Id. ¶ 21. Once, “[d]uring a team photograph, Father Lery 5 placed his hands and fingers on Plaintiff’s bare skin under her shirt, just above her breast, in an 6 alleged attempt to help her ‘tuck’ her collar in.” Id. ¶ 22. “When Father Lery placed his hands 7 down Plaintiff’s shirt, he whispered to Plaintiff, ‘I hope it is ok that I am doing this.’” Id. ¶ 23.
8 “Plaintiff immediately objected and asked that he stop.” Id. “On another occasion, Father Lery 9 asked Plaintiff to come back to his private office, so that he could give her a back and shoulder 10 massage.” Id. ¶ 25. Plaintiff declined. Id.

11 Plaintiff reported the conduct to her supervisors on two different occasions. When she 12 verbally reported the conduct to Defendants Dr. Harris and Dr. Kinderman, Dr. Harris replied, 13 “Not again!” Id. ¶ 28. The Defendants took no steps to investigate or to address the misconduct at 14 that time. Id. Plaintiff reported the conduct again, this time via email, to Defendants Dr. Harris 15 and Dr. Kinderman. Id. ¶ 29. Defendant Dr. Harris responded by calling Plaintiff on her cell 16 phone and “urg[ing] Plaintiff not to report the incident.” Id. Dr. Harris also “demanded that 17 Plaintiff cover up the email that she had sent.” Id. Defendants told Plaintiff that they “want to 18 protect everyone on [the] team, including Father Bruce,” and they instructed Plaintiff not to “put 19 anything like this in writing again.” Id.

20 In June 2015, San Francisco General Hospital’s human resources department contacted 21 Savin to inform her that another nurse on the palliative care team had complained about Father 22 Lery’s sexual harassment. Id. ¶ 30. In total, Plaintiff alleges that “at least three other female 23 employees of San Francisco General Hospital made sexual harassment complaints against Father 24 Lery.” Id. ¶ 27. “[T]he hospital directors asked Plaintiff to attend a meeting to explain what 25 happened with Father Lery,” and the hospital’s human resources department asked Plaintiff to 26 participate in an investigation. Id. ¶ 31. Plaintiff filed a formal written complaint with the 27 hospital’s human resources department, but the department later informed Plaintiff “that there was 28 nothing that they could do to discipline Father Lery, as Defendants claimed he was not a ‘City’

1 employee.” Id. ¶¶ 31-32.

2 Plaintiff alleges that she was subjected to retaliation after she filed her formal complaint 3 with the hospital’s human resources department. Id. ¶ 35. Specifically, she alleges that 4 Defendants “fail[ed] to properly and reasonably accommodate her medical condition and 5 disability, thus subjecting Plaintiff to constructive termination . . . ” Id. Plaintiff further alleges 6 that, “when [she] made job inquiries in her field, Defendants actively interfered with Plaintiff’s 7 efforts” and “mischaracterized Plaintiff’s qualifications and work.” Id. ¶¶ 35-38. Plaintiff made a 8 retaliation complaint to the human resources department, which conducted an investigation and 9 found that her complaints were “substantiated,” but nonetheless “refused to provide Plaintiff with 10 a copy of the investigation report or determination letter, unless she agreed to a ‘resolution’ of the 11 matter.” Id. 39-40.

12 Based on the above conduct, Plaintiff brings several federal and state law claims against 13 the City and County of San Francisco, the Archdiocese of San Francisco, Father Lery, Dr. Harris, 14 and Dr. Kinderman. Id. ¶¶ 41-82. She asserts two claims against Defendant Father Lery, both of 15 which are relevant for purposes of the present motion to dismiss. First, she brings a claim against 16 Father Lery under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for deprivation of her constitutional rights to privacy, free 17 speech, and right to petition under the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States 18 Constitution. Id. ¶¶ 41-46. Second, she brings a claim against Father Lery under California’s Fair 19 Employment and Housing Act (“FEHA”) for sexual harassment. Id. ¶¶ 59-65. She seeks relief in 20 the form of actual damages, punitive damages, and injunctive relief. Id. at 17.

21 Father Lery now moves to dismiss both claims against him. ECF No. 46.

22 II. LEGAL STANDARD

23 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(a)(2) requires that a complaint contain “a short and plain 24 statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief.” While a complaint need not 25 contain detailed factual allegations, facts pleaded by a plaintiff must be “enough to raise a right to 26 relief above the speculative level.” Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007). To 27 survive a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter that, 28 when accepted as true, states a claim that is plausible on its face. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662,

1 678 (2009). “A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows 2 the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct
3 alleged.” Id. While this standard is not a probability requirement, “where a complaint pleads facts 4 that are merely consistent with a defendant’s liability, it stops short of the line between possibility 5 and plausibility of entitlement to relief.” Id. (internal quotation marks omitted). In determining 6 whether a plaintiff has met this plausibility standard, the Court must accept all factual allegations 7 in the complaint as true and construe the pleadings in the light most favorable to the 8 plaintiff. Knievel v. ESPN, 393 F.3d 1068, 1072 (9th Cir. 2005). “Although leave to amend 9 should be given freely, a district court may dismiss without leave where a plaintiff’s proposed 10 amendments would fail to cure the pleading deficiencies and amendment would be futile.”
11 Cervantes v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 656 F.3d 1034, 1041 (9th Cir. 2011).

12 III. DISCUSSION

13 Father Lery moves to dismiss both of Plaintiff’s claims against him on the following 14 grounds: (1) Plaintiff has not alleged facts to establish that he was acting under color of law, as 15 required to state a claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983; and (2) Father Lery is exempt from liability 16 under FEHA because he is an employee of a religious corporation, the Archdiocese of San 17 Francisco. ECF No. 46 at 2. Father Lery also argues that Plaintiff’s allegations would require 18 “this Court to make an impermissible adjudication of what is and is not ‘religious’ in nature in 19 violation of the First Amendment.” Id. at 3. The Court addresses each argument in turn.

20 A. Section 1983

21 Section 1983 provides that “[e]very person who, under color of any statute, ordinance, 22 regulation, custom, or usage, of any State . . . subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen of the 23 United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof to the deprivation of any rights, 24 privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws, shall be liable to the party injured .
25 . . .” 42 U.S.C. § 1983. “The purpose of § 1983 is to deter state actors from using the badge of 26 their authority to deprive individuals of their federally guaranteed rights.” McDade v. West, 223 27 F.3d 1135, 1139 (9th Cir. 2000) (citing Wyatt v. Cole, 504 U.S. 158, 161 (1992)).

28 To state a claim for relief under Section 1983, Plaintiff must plead two essential elements:

1 (1) that the Defendant acted under color of state law; and (2) that the Defendant caused her to be 2 deprived of a right secured by the Constitution and laws of the United States. Johnson v.
3 Knowles, 113 F.3d 1114, 1117 (9th Cir. 1997) (citing Howerton v. Gabica, 708 F.2d 380, 382 (9th 4 Cir. 1983)). Only the first element is at issue here.

5 “The traditional definition of acting under color of state law requires that the defendant in a 6 § 1983 action have exercised power possessed by virtue of state law and made possible only 7 because the wrongdoer is clothed with the authority of state law.” Id. at 1139–40 (internal 8 quotation marks omitted). And “[i]t is firmly established that a defendant in a § 1983 suit acts 9 under color of state law when he abuses the position given to him by the State.” Id. “Thus, 10 generally, a public employee acts under color of state law while acting in his official capacity or 11 while exercising his responsibilities pursuant to state law.” Id. “For conduct to relate to state 12 authority, it must bear some similarity to the nature of the powers and duties assigned to the 13 defendants.” Dang Vang v. Vang Xiong X. Toyed, 944 F.2d 476, 480 (9th Cir. 1991) (quoting 14 Murphy v. Chicago Transit Authority, 638 F. Supp. 464, 468 (N.D. Ill. 1986)).

15 The Ninth Circuit applied this standard in the context of alleged sexual abuse by a 16 government employee in Dang Vang v. Vang Xiong X. Toyed, 944 F.2d 476 (9th Cir. 1991). In 17 that case, the Ninth Circuit held that there was sufficient evidence to support the jury’s conclusion 18 that a Washington state employee “responsible for interviewing and finding refugees suitable for 19 employment” acted under color of law when he raped refugees who had contacted him in order to 20 find employment. Id. The court reasoned that “[b]oth plaintiffs in this case came into contact 21 with [the defendant] because of their need for employment and their understanding that [the 22 defendant] and his department could be relied upon to supply jobs to Hmong refugees.” Id. at 23 480. Based on this and other evidence, the court concluded that “[t]he jury could have found that 24 each plaintiff was raped during a meeting with [the defendant] related to the provision of services 25 pursuant to his state employment.” Id. As a result, the court decided that “the evidence was 26 sufficient to lead the jury to conclude [the defendant] acted in abuse of his state authority, and to 27 find that he acted under color of state law in raping the plaintiffs . . .” Id. (emphasis in original).

28 The Ninth Circuit distinguished the facts of Dang Vang from another case, Murphy v.

1 Chicago Transit Authority, 638 F. Supp. 464 (N.D. Ill. 1986). Id. at 479-80. In Murphy, an 2 attorney employed by the Chicago Transit Authority sued her coworkers under Section 1983 for 3 sexual harassment at her workplace. Murphy, 638 F. Supp. at 465-66. The Murphy court 4 acknowledged that the defendant coworkers “engaged in their abusive and offensive conduct while 5 at their place of employment” and that they “were capable of harassing plaintiff only because their 6 jobs enabled them to have frequent encounters with her.” Id. at 468. However, the court noted, 7 this “does not mean that defendants’ actions were pursued under color of state law.” Id. The court 8 found that “the humiliating comments and harassing behavior had nothing to do with, and bore no 9 similarity to, the nature of the staff attorney job.” Id. Because “the abusive conduct was not in 10 any way related to the duties and powers incidental to the job of CTA staff attorney,” the court 11 concluded that the defendants were not acting under color of law. Id.

12 Collectively, Dang Vang and Murphy establish that “[a] state official may be liable for co-13 worker harassment under section 1983 when the abuse is related to state-conferred authority or 14 duties . . . ” Anthony v. County Of Sacramento Sheriff's Department, 845 F. Supp. 1396, 1401 15 (E.D. Cal. 1994); see also, e.g., Sanchez v. California, 90 F. Supp. 3d 1036, 1065-66 (E.D. Cal.
16 2015) (holding that the defendant coworker was not acting under color of law because “[t]he 17 actions [he] allegedly took in sexually harassing Plaintiff do not bear any similarity to the nature 18 of the powers and duties assigned to correctional officers”). Therefore, this Court must determine 19 whether there is a “nexus between the defendant’s misconduct and his relationship to the state,” or 20 alternatively, whether the “acts of co-worker harassment . . . occurred in a state-created workplace 21 but were . . . independent of state roles and functions.” Anthony, 845 F. Supp. at 1401.

22 The Court concludes that Plaintiff has failed to adequately allege the requisite nexus
23 between the alleged sexual harassment and Father Lery’s official duties. Although Plaintiff 24 alleges that Father Lery was employed by a government entity,¹ government employment is not 25

26 ¹ Father Lery disputes this, arguing that “Plaintiff pleads no facts establishing that [he] was paid 27 by, or received any benefits from, the City, or any specific facts that the City directed or controlled 28 any of [his duties].” ECF No. 46 at 5-6. As explained below in Part III.B., compensation is not dispositive of the employment inquiry, and Plaintiff has plausibly alleged that Father Lery was jointly employed by the City and the Archdiocese of San Francisco.

1 sufficient on its own to show that an individual was acting under color of state law. FAC, ECF 2 No. 39 ¶ 4, 8; Polk County v. Dodson, 454 U.S. 312, 321 (1981). Nor is the fact that the alleged 3 misconduct occurred on work premises sufficient to show that the misconduct was related to the 4 authority conferred on Father Lery by the state. Murphy, 638 F. Supp. at 468. Aside from these 5 insufficient allegations, Plaintiff fails to allege any facts to show that Father Lery's alleged sexual 6 harassment was related to his official duties, which she describes in her complaint to include
7 "provid[ing] counseling and support services to patients of all faiths." FAC, ECF No. 39 ¶ 8.²
8 Therefore, Plaintiff's own description of Father Lery's official duties suggests that the alleged 9 sexual harassment was "independent of state roles and functions." Sanchez, 90 F. Supp. 3d at 10 1065–66. Accordingly, the Court grants the motion to dismiss the Section 1983 claim against 11 Father Lery.

12 However, the Court grants Plaintiff leave to amend her complaint to allege additional facts 13 to show that Father Lery was acting under color of law at the time of the alleged sexual 14 harassment. Leave to amend should be given freely, and amendment would not be futile in this 15 instance because the state action element of Section 1983 liability is heavily fact-intensive. See 16 McDade, 223 F.3d at 1139 (describing the state action requirement as "a process of sifting facts 17 and weighing circumstances").

18 The Court addresses one final argument to clarify the scope of amendment. Contrary to 19 Father Lery's contention, Plaintiff does not need to show that the deprivation of her constitutional 20 rights was "caused by an official policy." ECF No. 46 at 8 (citing Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs.
21 of City of N.Y., 436 U.S. 658, 690–95 (1978)). In Monell, the Supreme Court held that local 22 governments cannot be sued under Section 1983 for injuries inflicted by their employees unless 23 the employee was acting pursuant to a government "policy or custom." Monell, 436 U.S. at 24 690–95. But the defendant employees in Monell were "sued solely in their official capacities." Id.

26 ² Plaintiff alleges that Father Lery "placed his hands on a female patient's breasts, and . . . placed 27 his hands just above a patient's sister's breast, who only spoke Spanish." FAC, ECF No. 39 ¶ 26.
28 Although this misconduct arguably constitutes an abuse of his official position vis-à-vis his patients, Plaintiff has made no showing that she has standing to vindicate the constitutional rights of third parties that are not before the Court. See Outdoor Media Grp., Inc. v. City of Beaumont, 464 F. App'x 611, 613 (9th Cir. 2011).

1 at 661. And Monell does not apply to state officials or individuals who are sued in their individual
2 capacities. See Kentucky v. Graham, 473 U.S. 159, 166 (1985); Amory v. Katz, No. 3:15-CV-
3 01535 (VAB), 2016 WL 7377091, at *5 (D. Conn. Dec. 19, 2016). Because Plaintiff sues Father 4 Lery in his individual capacity, and does not bring a Section 1983 claim against any municipal 5 entity, she does not need to allege that he was acting pursuant to an official policy or custom.
6 FAC, ECF No. 39, ¶¶ 7, 41-46.

7 The Court dismisses Plaintiff's Section 1983 claim against Father Lery without prejudice.

8 B. FEHA

9 Section 12940(j) of the California Government Code makes it unlawful “[f]or an employer, 10 labor organization, employment agency, apprenticeship training program or any training program 11 leading to employment, or any other person, because of . . . sex . . . , to harass an employee, an 12 applicant, an unpaid intern or volunteer, or a person providing services pursuant to a contract.” 13 Cal. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1). Section 12940(j) also provides that “[a]n employee of an entity 14 subject to this subdivision is personally liable for any harassment prohibited by this section that is 15 perpetrated by the employee, regardless of whether the employer or covered entity knows or 16 should have known of the conduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action.”
17 Id. § 12940(j)(3).

18 Section 12940(j) excludes non-profit religious associations or corporations from the 19 definition of an “employer,” except as provided in Section 12926.2. Id. § 12940(j)(4)(B). In turn, 20 Section 12926.2 provides that a religious corporation or association is an “employer” “with 21 respect to persons employed by the religious association or corporation to perform duties, other 22 than religious duties, at a health care facility operated by the religious association or corporation 23 for the provision of health care that is not restricted to adherents of the religion that established the 24 association or corporation.” Id. § 12926.2(c).

25 Because the Archdiocese of San Francisco is not an “employer” under FEHA,³ it is exempt

26
27 ³ The Court takes judicial notice of the fact that the Archdiocese of San Francisco is a non-profit 28 Roman Catholic institution pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 201 because it is generally known or readily determinable. ECF No. 47. The Court also takes judicial notice of the Archdiocese's website, which describes its mission. Id. However, the Court denies the request to 1 from Plaintiff's sexual harassment claim. See Bohnert v. Roman Catholic Archbishop of San 2 Francisco, 136 F. Supp. 3d 1094, 1111–13 (N.D. Cal. 2015). So are its employees. See Taylor v.

3 Beth Eden Baptist Church, 294 F. Supp. 2d 1074, 1083-84 (N.D. Cal. 2003) (holding that the 4 religious entity exemption for employers extends to employees of such an entity). This 5 interpretation aligns with the text of the statute, which only imposes personal liability for 6 harassment on “[a]n employee of an entity subject to this subdivision.” Cal. Gov. Code §
7 12940(j)(3)(emphasis added). Moreover, the exception in Section 12926.2(c) does not apply here
8 because San Francisco General Hospital is not “operated by” the Archdiocese. Cal. Gov. Code § 9 12926.2(c).

10 However, Plaintiff alleges that “Father Lery was employed jointly by both Defendants San 11 Francisco General Hospital and the Archdiocese.” FAC, ECF No. 39 ¶ 8 (emphasis added).
12 While the latter is exempt from FEHA, the former is not. Therefore, Father Lery can be held 13 personally liable for sexual harassment under FEHA if he was jointly employed by both the 14 Archdiocese and the City.

15 Courts have recognized joint employment in the context of FEHA and its federal 16 counterpart, Title VII. See Vernon v. State, 116 Cal. App. 4th 114, 121-131 (2004); Knitter v.
17 Corvias Military Living, LLC, 758 F.3d 1214, 1226 (10th Cir. 2014) (applying joint employer test 18 under Title VII). To determine whether the plaintiff was jointly employed, courts consider several 19 factors, including the following: payment of salary and benefits; ownership of the equipment 20 necessary to performance of the job; the location where the work is performed; the obligation of 21 the defendant to train the employee; the defendant’s authority to hire, transfer, promote, discipline 22 or discharge the employee; the authority to establish work schedules and assignments; the 23 defendant’s discretion to determine compensation; and the extent to which the work performed is 24 done under the direction of a supervisor, among other factors. Vernon, 116 Cal. App. 4th at

25
26 take judicial notice of third party websites describing the Archdiocese of San Francisco because 27 those sources are not capable of accurate and ready determination. See Gerritsen v. Warner Bros.
28 Entm’t Inc., 112 F. Supp. 3d 1011, 1028-29 (C.D. Cal. 2015) (“As a general matter, courts are hesitant to take notice of information found on third party websites and routinely deny requests for judicial notice . . . ”) (summarizing cases).

1 124-26. Although no single factor is dispositive, “the extent of the defendant’s right to control the 2 means and manner of the workers’ performance is the most important.” Id. (internal quotation
3 marks omitted). To survive a motion to dismiss, “a plaintiff seeking to hold multiple entities 4 liable as joint employers must plead specific facts that explain how the defendants are related and 5 how the conduct underlying the claims is attributable to each.” Andrade v. Arby's Rest. Grp., Inc., 6 No. 15-CV-03175 NC, 2015 WL 6689475, at *2 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 3, 2015) (internal quotation 7 marks and brackets omitted) (dismissing claims against one defendant because plaintiff did not 8 “allege[] facts showing that [the defendant] controlled her employment or [the co-defendant’s] 9 employment of her”).

10 Plaintiff has plausibly alleged that Father Lery was jointly employed by the Archdiocese 11 and San Francisco General Hospital. FAC, ECF No. 39 ¶ 8. She alleges that, although the 12 Archdiocese initially assigned Father Lery to the Palliative Care Team at San Francisco General
13 Hospital, “San Francisco General Hospital managed and controlled all aspects of Father Lery’s 14 employment, while [he] worked at San Francisco General Hospital.” Id. As explained above, the 15 entity’s control over the employee’s work is the most important factor to consider. In addition, 16 Plaintiff alleges that Father Lery performed his work at the hospital and was supervised by 17 physicians at the hospital. Id. ¶¶ 7-10, 15. Plaintiff further alleges that the hospital’s human 18 resources department handled her internal complaint about Father Lery’s conduct and conducted 19 an investigation, but that the hospital was ultimately unable to discipline Father Lery because 20 “they claimed he was not a ‘City’ employee.” Id. ¶ 30-32. Given that the hospital handled several 21 internal complaints regarding Father Lery’s misconduct, including her own, Plaintiff has also 22 pleaded specific facts that explain why the hospital knew or should have known about the 23 harassing conduct, and thus why the hospital is also potentially liable under FEHA. Id.
24 Construing Plaintiff’s allegations in the light most favorable to her, as the Court must when ruling
25 on a motion to dismiss, the Court concludes that Plaintiff has plausibly alleged that Father Lery 26 was jointly employed by the Archdiocese and the City.

27 Although Father Lery may eventually show that he was employed solely by the 28 Archdiocese, and thus that he is exempt under FEHA, the joint employment inquiry “tends to be

1 intensely fact-dependent and the ultimate determination is based on the totality of the 2 circumstances . . .” DelGiacco v. Cox Commc'ns, Inc., No. SACV 14-0200 DOC, 2015 WL
3 1535260, at *7 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 6, 2015) (citing Vernon, 116 Cal. App. 4th at 125). “Such fact-4 intensive inquiries . . . are best left to trial or summary judgment, and not to a motion to dismiss.”
5 Garbini v. Prot. One, Inc., 49 F. App'x 169, 170–71 (9th Cir. 2002). The Court therefore denies 6 the motion to dismiss Plaintiff’s sexual harassment claim against Father Lery at this early stage in 7 the litigation.

8 C. First Amendment

9 In her complaint, Plaintiff alleges that, “[a]lthough Father Lery was assigned as the clergy 10 member of the Palliative Care Team, his duties were not primarily religious in nature, and he 11 provided counseling and support services to patients of all faiths.” FAC, ECF No. 39 ¶ 8. Based 12 on this allegation, Father Lery argues that “Plaintiff essentially asks this Court to make an 13 impermissible adjudication of what is and is not ‘religious’ in nature in violation of the First 14 Amendment.” ECF No. 46 at 3, 9. To support this argument, Father Lery relies in part on case 15 law addressing the ministerial exception to employment laws. Id. (citing Hosanna-Tabor 16 Evangelical Lutheran Church & Sch. v. E.E.O.C., 565 U.S. 171 (2012)). This argument fails.

17 Although the Supreme Court has held that the First Amendment’s religion clauses create a 18 ministerial exception to employment discrimination laws, Hosanna-Tabor, 565 U.S. at 188-90, 19 Father Lery concedes that “the First Amendment does not shield [him] from liability for 20 harassment . . .” ECF No. 73 at 3. Indeed, the ministerial exception only forecloses sexual 21 harassment and retaliation claims to the extent they implicate protected employment decisions—22 i.e., “a church’s decisions about whom to employ as a minister.” Elvig v. Calvin Presbyterian 23 Church, 375 F.3d 951, 953, 964 (9th Cir. 2004) (refusing to “afford[] blanket First Amendment 24 protection to churches that unreasonably fail to address clear instances of sexual harassment . . .
25 even when no protected ministerial choice or church doctrine is in fact involved”). Because 26 Plaintiff’s allegations of sexual harassment do not implicate any protected employment decisions 27 about whom to employ as a minister, her claims are not barred by the ministerial exception. See 28 generally FAC, ECF No. 39.

1 Nor does the ministerial exception somehow prevent this Court from considering whether 2 Father Lery’s job duties were primarily religious in nature. ECF No. 73 at 3 (“Plaintiff’s
3 attempted characterization of Fr. Lery’s pastoral counseling as being ‘non-religious’ presents a 4 matter that is not itself justiciable . . .”). The Supreme Court’s reasoning in Hosanna-Tabor, the 5 case that established the ministerial exception, belies this very contention. There, the Court 6 refused “to adopt a rigid formula for deciding when an employee qualifies as a minister.”
7 Hosanna-Tabor, 565 U.S. at 190. Instead, it considered “all the circumstances of [] employment” 8 to determine whether the ministerial exception applied to the plaintiff in that case. Id. at 190-91.
9 For example, the Court considered “the formal title given [plaintiff] by the Church, the substance 10 reflected in that title, her own use of that title, and the important religious functions she performed 11 for the Church.” Id. at 191-92. The Court noted that plaintiff’s “job duties”—which included 12 teaching her students religion and leading them in prayer – “reflected a role in conveying the 13 Church’s message and carrying out its mission.” Id. Other courts have engaged in a similar 14 analysis, noting that, “[a]t the very least, the determination of whether the ‘ministerial exception’ 15 applies depends upon numerous factual determinations, such as whether [the employee’s] 16 functions were primarily spiritual or religious in nature, or whether the church held her out as a 17 spiritual leader.” Bohnert v. Roman Catholic Archbishop of San Francisco, 136 F. Supp. 3d 1094, 18 1113–15 (N.D. Cal. 2015). Therefore, the ministerial exception does not prevent this Court from 19 adjudicating whether Father Lery’s job duties were primarily religious in nature.

20 Father Lery also relies heavily on a case in which the California Supreme Court declined to 21 impose on pastoral counselors a duty to prevent suicide. ECF No. 46 at 9 (citing Nally v. Grace 22 Community Church of the Valley, 47 Cal. 3d 278, 299 (1988)); ECF No. 73 at 6 (quoting the same 23 case). As an initial matter, that case turned on “traditional tort law principles” for establishing a 24 duty of care, not constitutional questions. Nally, 47 Cal. 3d at 291, 292-299 (affirming the trial 25 court’s decision based on “well-established principles of tort law” and “not address[ing] the 26 constitutional issues posed by defendants”). Those tort law principles are simply not at issue in 27 this case, which involves an affirmative legal duty imposed by statute. To the extent the Nally 28 court even mentioned potential constitutional issues, it did so in dicta. The only mention of 1 religious abstention appears at the very end of the court’s analysis under the heading “Public 2 Policy Considerations.” Id. at 297-99. There, the court stated that, “even assuming that workable 3 standards of care could be established in the present case . . . it would certainly be impractical, 4 and quite possibly unconstitutional, to impose a duty of care on pastoral counselors” because 5 “[s]uch a duty would necessarily be intertwined with the religious philosophy of the particular 6 denomination or ecclesiastical teachings of the religious entity.” Id. at 299. Father Lery does not 7 argue, and the Court suspects he could not successfully argue, that the statutory duty not to 8 sexually harass a co-worker is similarly intertwined with religious philosophy or doctrine such that 9 the Court cannot or should not adjudicate this dispute.

10 “Absent a religious justification for the harassment [] alleged or a protected, ministerial 11 choice that [Plaintiff’s] suit would second-guess,” Father Lery’s argument “boil[s] down to a 12 ‘generalized and diffuse concern for church autonomy’ that [does] not trigger the ministerial 13 exception.” Elvig, 375 F.3d at 956 (quoting Bolland v. California Province of the Soc’y of Jesus, 14 196 F.3d 940, 948 (9th Cir. 1999)). The issue to be adjudicated – i.e., whether Father Lery 15 subjected the Plaintiff to sexual harassment in violation of California law – involves a “purely 16 secular inquiry.” Elvig, 375 F.3d at 959. Therefore, the Court may adjudicate Plaintiff’s sexual 17 harassment claim against Father Lery consistent with the First Amendment.

18 CONCLUSION

19 The Court grants the motion to dismiss Plaintiff’s Section 1983 claim without prejudice 20 and denies the motion to dismiss Plaintiff’s FEHA sexual harassment claim. If Plaintiff wishes to 21 cure the deficiency in her Section 1983 claim against Father Lery, she must file an amended 22 complaint within thirty (30) days of this Order. Failure to file the amended complaint by the 23 deadline will result in the dismissal of Plaintiff’s Section 1983 claim as to Father Lery.

24 IT IS SO ORDERED.
